 delight is in tno,¹ O lord¹ of the universe. What has he not done for the attain ment of heaven, or for self-emancipation, who has placed a firm faith in Vishnu, the grantor of all desires ? Who is there in the universe, wiio can worship or hymnise thee to the fullest extent? Be pleased to accept this humble and deficient worship which I have made of thee, today.

Thus I have narrated to you, O sage, the hymn to the discus-wielding deity ; sing his glories in a devout spirit, if you \yish to attain the supreme bliss.
 He, who recites this hymn at the close of a worship of the universal preceptor, is able to work out his salvation in no time, and becomes freed from the bonds of re-births.
 Even in the Kali Yuga he, who recites this hymn, thrice, every day* m a pure spirit, obtains all that he wishes ^6 obtain.
 By reacting this hymn to Vishnu, a sonless man obtains a son, a sick person gets rid of disease, an jridi^ent man obtains wealth, a captive obtains his liberty, a seeker after erudition obtains erudition^ a seeker after fame obtains renown, even the remembrances.
 of his past girths recur to a man who recites this hymn. He, who <sin'gs the glories of the absolute subjectivity, is truly ^vise, is really pure svnd,truthful in. his speech. He is omniscient a,nd acquires the merit of performing all the religious. rites. Those, who are not propelled to do any thing for the service of Hari (God), or are not fondly moved towards him,, are beyond the pale of all religion.

No. purificatory rit$ can purify the mind or Speech of the miscreant, who has not an unswerving faith in the all-pervading lord (Vishnu).
By duly worshiping the god Har'i, the grantor of all comforts^ a person obtains- whatever he wishes to. obtain iA this life.
I make obeisance to the immortal, birthlessSj all-pervading god, who resides in the hearts of all creatures, and whom the Asuras, Siddhas, and erudite persons can not comprehend in t^eir iflinds, whom only thp holy sages know, and who is the sole witness, of the universal phenomena*
